Dear Prime Minister, Ministers, and delegates,

NatureCOP in Montreal is a moment we can't afford to miss.

Nature is in crisis as more and more species' populations collapse and face extinction. The whole world is looking to Canada for leadership to make the most of the summit in Montreal and adopt a Global Biodiversity Framework that will put the planet on the road to recovery.

I hope that Canada and other world leaders will adopt a global agreement and an action plan for Canada that:

- Protects 30 percent of land, ocean, and freshwater by 2030
- Supports the conservation leadership of Indigenous Peoples around the world and here at home
- Invests in nature-based solutions to climate change
- Restores degraded ecosystems and ensures the recovery of threatened wildlife
- Promotes urban biodiversity and equitable access for all people

Canada has already committed to halt and reverse nature loss in our country by 2030. I ask you to share that bold vision with the world at NatureCOP in Montreal and help usher in a plan for Canada and the world that will lead to the full recovery of nature around the globe.

Canada and the world are counting on you.

Thank you,
